Chapter 6: Build Your Squad Before You Launch

How to Attract Fans, Friends & Future Customers (Even If You're Just Starting)

Let's get one thing straight — you don't need a product to start building power.

What you need... is people. People who believe in you. Who rides with your mission? Who hit follow, cheer you on, and say “I'm IN” before your first sale even drops.

That's how authentic brands are born.

Not from ads. Not from logos.

But from the connection.

This chapter is all about turning strangers into your ride-or-dies — a loyal audience that grows with you. Not when you're famous. Not when it's all perfect.

Right now. As you build. As you learn. As you rise.

Let's create your tribe of future customers, hype squad, and biz besties — one post, one story, one vibe at a time.

No gatekeeping. No filters. Just the real you, making moves.

Ready to magnetize your people?

Let's go.

WHY THIS MATTERS

Okay, real talk... You might be thinking,

“But I don't even have a full business yet... what do I share?”

Here's the big secret that most grown-ups miss:

Before you sell something, you build BELIEF.

Belief in YOU.

Your story.

Your mission.

Your vibe.

Because when people are rooting for you...

- 👉 They share your posts.
- 👉 They cheer you on.
- 👉 And yep — they buy when you're ready.

So instead of hiding your idea until it's perfect, let's bring people along for the ride.

5 Steps to Build Your Dream Team (A.K.A. Your Audience)

You don't need a big budget, a viral moment, or a million followers. You just need the right people — who vibe with your story, believe in your mission, and wanna come along for the ride.

Here's how to start building your dream squad — step by step.

1 Pick Your Playground

First, go where your people already scroll, laugh, and learn.

Ask yourself:

“Where would my ideal buyer already hang out online?”

That's your stage. Your content zone. Your digital HQ. Pick just one to start — and OWN it like a boss.

Popular Playgrounds for Kid CEOs:

- ★ Instagram → Eye-catching pics, Reels, behind-the-scenes, story polls
- ★ TikTok → Fast tips, funny skits, biz challenges, and personal stories
- ★ YouTube → Tutorials, “Watch me build this” series, unboxings, reviews
- ★ Discord / WhatsApp → Invite-only squad chats, sneak peeks, feedback loops
- ★ Email List → VIP insiders, early access, secret drops (great for long-term fans)

 Pro Tip: If you're already active somewhere, start there.

Familiar = faster momentum.

2 Share the Journey, Not Just the Finish Line

Nobody connects with perfect.

People connect with progress.

So instead of waiting until your business is “done,” bring people into the messy middle. Show them the real behind-the-scenes.

What to post:

- ✓ Why did you start this idea in the first place
- ✓ What excites you or totally freaks you out
- ✓ A fail that made you laugh (or cry)
- ✓ A tiny win that made your day
- ✓ What your BIG vision looks like

Example Post:

“Tried to shoot my product demo video today. Nailed the lighting... forgot to press record 😞. Starting over tomorrow. That’s entrepreneur life, right?”

When people feel like they’re building with you... They’ll stick around to cheer you on when it all takes off.

3 Give Before You Ask

Want trust? Want engagement? Want fans for life?

Give value first.

Be the kid who helps, shares, and surprises. No strings. Just good energy + good info.

Easy ways to give value:

- 👉 Share a Canva template or an AI tool you used
- 👉 Teach something simple: “Here’s how I designed my logo.”
- 👉 Recommend a free app, course, or YouTube video
- 👉 Shout out to a fellow kidpreneur doing cool stuff

 People will think: “Whoa. If they’re giving this much away... imagine what their paid stuff is like.”

Generosity builds buzz and buzz builds business.

4 Build a Waitlist (Yep, Even at 12!)

If someone says, “I’m interested” — capture it! That interest is pure gold. Even one email = one future customer. Don’t wait until your product is finished. Build your waitlist while you build your offer.

 Tools to start your waitlist (free or low-cost):

- ☒ ConvertKit – beginner-friendly + great templates
- ☒ Beehiiv – cool design + newsletter vibes
- ☒ MailerLite – simple + solid for small lists
- ☒ Carrd – quick landing pages, even without code
- ☒ GoHighLevel – advanced if you want automation

 Your landing page should say:

-  “Something awesome is coming  “Be the first to know + get VIP perks”
-  “Drop your email to join the early access crew.”

Even 10 sign-ups = proof your idea has real people waiting for it.

5 Engage With Your Early Fans (Like They're Gold)

If you only have five followers?

Treat them like 5,000.

Because they're showing up before the crowd.

Here's how to turn early fans into lifelong supporters:

- ☆ Reply to every comment — show them they matter
- ☆ Celebrate new followers — even with a fun “Welcome!” story
- ☆ Ask questions — like “Which logo do you like best?” or “Should I drop hoodies or hats first?”
- ☆ DM someone and say, “Thanks for following — I’m building something cool, glad you’re here!”

These first fans become your beta testers, your repost squad, your early buyers, and your loudest hype crew.

You're not just getting followers. You're building a connection. And that's the real flex. ✨

🌟 Remember: People buy from people they believe in. And belief doesn't start when you launch... it starts the moment you show up and share the ride.

Are you ready to rally your squad? Let's get loud. Let's get real. Let's build that fanbase from the ground up.

💡 Real Kidpreneur Moves:

- ☑️ Alina Morse (Zolli Candy): Shared her idea with school friends and pitched in classrooms before it hit shelves.
- ☑️ Moziah Bridges (Mo's Bows): Wore his own bow ties and posted pics online — boom! The buzz began.
- ☑️ Lily Adeleye (Lily Frilly): Shared her bows on social, then launched with Walmart backing her brand.

They didn't wait. They started with PEOPLE first.
